To M.W. Rohan de Silva:

This letter serves as formal confirmation that Mr. M.W. Neksha DeSilva, a student of Ananda College, Colombo, Sri Lanka, is the sole author of the research paper titled:

- "Temporal Derivative Soft-Sensing and Reconstructing Solar Radiation and Heat Flux from Common Environmental Sensors" (Paper ID: 1571241750)

This paper has been peer reviewed and accepted for presentation at IEEE SoutheastCon 2026, an annual flagship conference of IEEE Region 3, recognized internationally for its technical rigor and for advancing research across engineering, computing, and technology disciplines.

Mr. M.W. Neksha DeSilva's paper has been accepted into Track 5: Microelectronics, Devices, and Sensors, which is a competitive technical track within the conference program.

Conference Details Event:	IEEE SoutheastCon
2026 Dates:	13 to 15 March 2026
Location:	Huntsville, Alabama, United States
Organizer:	Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers (IEEE)

IEEE SoutheastCon is a long-standing, internationally respected technical conference that brings together researchers, academics, industry professionals, and students from across the globe. Participation in this event represents a significant academic achievement and provides valuable exposure to the global engineering research community.

Mr. M.W. Neksha DeSilva has been invited to present his accepted work at the conference. His in-person attendance is required to deliver the presentation necessary for the paper's inclusion in IEEE Xplore and to fulfill the authorship obligations.

As Mr. M.W. Neksha DeSilva is a minor, his in-person attendance at IEEE SoutheastCon 2026 requires that he be accompanied by a legal guardian or designated chaperone. All travel-related costs for the guardian or chaperone are the sole responsibility of the individual and are not covered, sponsored, or reimbursed by the conference.

This letter is issued at the student's request to obtain the necessary approvals from the Sri Lankan Ministry of Education and the Principal of Ananda College to authorize his travel and grant official leave from school during the conference period. This letter does not constitute sponsorship, financial support, or supervision of the student's travel.
